

ABSTRACT

The inventive method serves to transmit data signals by means of virtually linked partial signals via synchronous data networks. To this end, the transmission capacity formed by the number of virtually linked partial signals is greater than the minimally required transmission capacity for transmitting the data signal.